

Jason Slattery

Director of Solar
GEM Energy

From an early age, Jason wanted to pursue a career that incorporated both technology and innovation. He earned a degree in construction management from Bowling Green University and began consulting on estimating software implementation in the field. He then joined the Rudolph Libbe Inc. team in preconstruction and special accounts preconstruction. A project management role followed until he discovered the opportunities in solar.

Jason's initial interest in solar came about as he saw the demand for solar systems in the industry increase, particularly the design/build and maintenance aspects. It became clear that this was a viable business and solar was established as a standalone group within the Rudolph Libbe Group of companies.

Now part of GEM Energy, Jason leads daily solar operations - from business development and customer interaction to guiding a team of project managers and personnel in the field - with a hands-on and detail-oriented approach. He takes pride in bringing up talent and paving the way to success.

For Jason, motivation stems from the constant challenges of navigating a relatively new and evolving space. His commitment to address the needs of RLG customers with solutions to make their visions reality – and doing so on time and under budget – keeps him focused. Customers have come to rely on Jason and GEM Energy for efficient, economical energy solutions and the ongoing delivery of value for their investment.
